Government Uses Ocean Mail Contracts as Levers to Settle Strike

WASHINGTON — One and one make two—in strikes as well as in mathematics.

Last Tuesday, at the height of the San Francisco general strike, the White House suddenly announced that Roosevelt had empowered Postmaster-General Jim Farley to investigate ocean mail contracts and cancel or modify any he considered unwarranted.

Two days later Big Jim, junketing leisurely about the Far West with a pocket full of political speeches, abruptly galvanized into action and revealed he was going to the Golden Gate City as an "arbitrator."

Two apparently unrelated incidents.

But behind the scenes they were parts of a very carefully considered secret strategy by means of which the administration hoped to bring industrial peace to the strife-worn West Coast community.

These are the facts on which this program is predicated.

FACT NO. 1: The Postoffice Department annually ladles out $26,000,000 in the form of ocean mail subsidies to American shipping lines. If this mail were transported on a poundage basis it would cost the government around $3,000,000.

FACT NO. 2: Everyone of the big shipping companies involved in the protracted maritime workers controversy which led to the general strike, is a heavy recipient of this lush government largesse.

FACT NO. 3: Secretary Perkins, General Johnson and Assistant Secretary McGrawdy, Chairman of the Federal Longshoremen's Board, consider these companies basically responsible for the failure of a peace agreement.

The Government has legal power to crack down on these juicy contracts. The conclusion is obvious.

Strike Lesson

San Francisco's general strike has served to impress one lesson on New Deal labor authorities; namely that local appointees, no matter how worthy, liberal, and highly esteemed, do not make effective arbiters.

It all gets down to the old truism that "Familiarity breeds contempt."

Experience has shown that these local selections, even when invested with the cloak of Federal power, rarely do as well as outside officials. Personal relations, friendships, other factors of a similar character, are on intangible, but potent, bar to forceful and decisive action.

Labor Secretary Perkins and Chairman Lloyd Garrison, of the New Labor Adjustment Board, privately are agreed on this fact.

As a result two important changes are destined:

1. In recommending future members to Federal arbitration bodies, Miss Perkins can be expected to avoid local selections as much as possible.

2. The system of regional labor boards, which the Labor Adjustment Board inherited from the liquidated National Labor Board, is to be drastically overhauled.

These regional agencies, made up entirely of local appointees have been a complete failure in handling really serious labor disputes.

Garrison's plans for reorganizing the system are still tentative. But the proposal being given serious consideration is that the present boards be slashed to one permanent member, to handle routine matters, with the membership to be expanded by appointment of experienced federal officials in the event of a serious controversy.

On the other hand, it is possible, that after further study the entire set-up may be junked.

BANK ROBBED BY FUGITIVES

Hamilton, Other Men Who Fled Texas Prison, In Kansas Holdup.

HOSTAGE STILL HELD
Three Others Freed After $4,000 Robbery.

OXFORD, Kan., July 24.—Bandits believed to be Ray Hamilton, Joe Palmer and Blackie Thompson, who escaped from the Texas state prison Sunday, and a fourth man, robbed the Oxford state bank of $4,000 today, speeding out of town in a hail of bullets with four hostages.

Three of the captives, Homer Jester, cashier of the bank; Daisy Bay, a bookkeeper, and Marion Carson, lumber company employee, were released a short distance from Oxford, but P. E. Donley, assistant cashier of the bank, still was held by the bandits and fears were felt for his safety.

SPEED TO OKLAHOMA
A posse led by Undersheriff Holt endeavored to pick up the trail of the bandit car, said to have been a dark Ford V-8 sedan bearing Oklahoma license plates. The car was headed south out of Oxford and it was presumed the desperadoes were making for the Oklahoma state line, nineteen miles away.

The bandits seized Donley as he approached the bank and compelled him to open the door. One of the bandits stood guard outside the bank while the others were inside looting the place of an undetermined amount of cash.

Jester and Miss Bay were seized as they arrived at the bank and Carson was waylaid by the bandit guard and compelled to get into the bandit car.

Otto Weniger, retired farmer and director of the bank, noticing Donley being escorted into the bank, followed.

MANY EXPECTED TO HEAR JORDAN

Meeting Open to Public In Chamber of Commerce Rooms Begins at 7:30

A large attendance is expected Tuesday evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms when Alan Jordan, executive secretary of the Ohio Valley Flood Control and Conservation congress, speaks.

The meeting is open to the public and there is no admission. It should not be mistaken for a regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce when supper is served. There is no meal this evening.

James I. Smith and C. E. Groce, president and vice president, respectively, of the Pickaway-co organization for the development of the river, urge that every person interested in the project attend the meeting to hear Mr. Jordan and the plans of the organization.

BARCH TO ERECT SALES PAVILION

Willard Barch, of Harrison-twp., was awarded the contract to construct a sales pavilion and other buildings to be a part of the auction project to be sponsored by the Pickaway Livestock Cooperative association, at a meeting of the board of directors Monday evening.

Work is expected to start in a few days. The pavilion will be located at the livestock yards on E. Corwin-st. It is hoped to have the buildings constructed by August 15.

STOCK YARDS HIT BY STRIKE

Handlers' Union Walks Out; 75,000 Head of Cattle Crowd Chicago Pens.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Eight hundred members of the Live Stock handlers' union, local 517, went on strike today at the union stock yards as 75,000 head of cattle, many of which had been shipped in from the drought-ridden areas: crowded the pens.

Officials of the union stock yards said the situation was acute. Pickets were posted at every gate to turn away members reporting for the day's work.

Trading at the yards was at a standstill today as a result of the strike. Most of the livestock received was nearby feeding stations to remain until the strike is settled. Farmers were advised not to ship any more livestock until further notice.

AS CRIME TRAIL ENDED

Cowley, Purvis' Assistant, Named Dillinger's Killer

Credited With Sending All Three Bullets Through Outlaw's Body; All Agents in Morgue Except Cowley Show Unused Revolvers to Reporter.

BY JACK LAIT
Copyright, 1934, By International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The man who has the deepest notch in his gun in the world is Samuel A. Cowley. He is the man who killed John Dillinger. Cowley is first assistant to Melvin Purvis, chief of the U. S. bureau of the department of justice here.

Agents of the department are traditionally instructed that they must have no individual identities. But no departmental regulations are big enough to obscure in anonymity the man who sent three bullets through the world's most notorious bad man.

STOOD BESIDE COWLEY
I stood beside Cowley last night in the morgue beside the dead body of the man whom he had so well rubbed out.

I got in the morgue through a series of breaks. With me was a Chicago cop who happened to be under rather dramatic obligations to me.

My copper friend had not been as impressed or as idle as I had been. It was none of his business. He was a finger print expert, and despite the attempt at obliteration, he had Dillinger's deadly marks bevo'd possible conjecture on the who's, loots and deltas in 15 minutes after we got there. I had interviewed Dillinger in the Crown Point jail and didn't need his affirmation—one look, the body still pink a-d warm, and I knew it was Dillinger.

That was easy. The whole world would soon know it was Dillinger. But the bureau of identification must perfect its records, and my friend had gotten the quick tip that a man was shot, probably Dillinger—and he should beat it—to the morgue.

But I was a reporter in Chicago for many years. And he was my friend. His assignment was cleaned up. Mine wasn't. I stood there, fascinated like a small-town boob on his first obituary. But he was a hard-boiled guy—well, not so very. He mooched around and, presently he sidled over to me and he said:

TO BE PROMOTED
"You see that guy with the black suit on and the cigar? He's a government dick, and he's going to be promoted."

That didn't particularly interest me. I knew a $125-a-month government dick who turned up a secretary to the president of the United States. So I asked how that could possibly affect my life. And he pulled down the left corner of his mouth (very much like Dillinger did when I interviewed him at the Crown Point jail) and he said: "That's the guy that croaked Dillinger."

I had known him for many years. He had never given me a wrong steer. Melvin Purvis and his Washington chief, J. Edgar Hoover, may think it policy to issue a formidable official denial. Never-the-less, Samuel A. Cowley, not only killed John Dillinger, but

SLAYER OF JACKSON MAN TO DIE NOV. 22

JACKSON, July 23.—Herbert Thacker, 21-year-old negro, today had been sentenced to die in the electric chair at the Ohio Penitentiary on November 22 for the brutal murder of Stephen Huntley, an aged reclusive, during a robbery which netted him $23.

Thacker was convicted of first degree murder charges two weeks ago. He was calm as Judge Roy Gillen pronounced sentence in contrast to the emotion he exhibited when he testified at his trial.

Harry Freeman, another negro and Thacker's alleged accomplice, was tried on similar charges but the jury disagreed. He will be retried at a later date, county officials said.

West at Lancaster

A delegation of Pickaway-co Democrats is expected to attend a rally in Lancaster, Tuesday night at which Congressman Charles West of Granville, candidate for the nomination of U. S. Senator, will be the principal speaker.

West is expected to launch a severe attack against Senator Simeon D. Fess and pledge his own whole-hearted and unflinching support to President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

All of the five counties in the 11th congressional district are expected to send delegations to the meeting.

FICKARDT FOR CO. TREASURER

Local Druggist Asks Republicans to Write Name On Ballot in August Voting.

In this pre-primary period when candidates for county, state and district offices are making the rounds to try to learn just how the election might go, an announcement was made Tuesday that somewhat stirred the political atmosphere.

George H. Fickardt, W. Main-st druggist, son of the late Fred Fickardt, disclosed that he intends to be a candidate for the county treasurer's job on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Fickardt's name will be written upon the ballot by members of his party. He needs eight per cent of the vote of his party to entitle him a place on the November ballot.

There is no Republican opposition at the primary, at least so far.

Mr. Fickardt, if he obtains the required number of votes, will meet the winner of the Earl Hoffman-R. C. Colville-Frank Anderson primary contest.

The druggist's announcement leaves only the common pleas court judgeship, the clerk's post and the sheriff's office without a contest in November, although the latter race is contested in the primary. Republicans have been put in the field for coroner, prosecutor, auditor, recorder and county commissioner.

MERCURY TO AGAIN REACH 100 MARK

Relief In Ohio Today To Be Wiped Out As Temperature Again Soars.

By International News Service

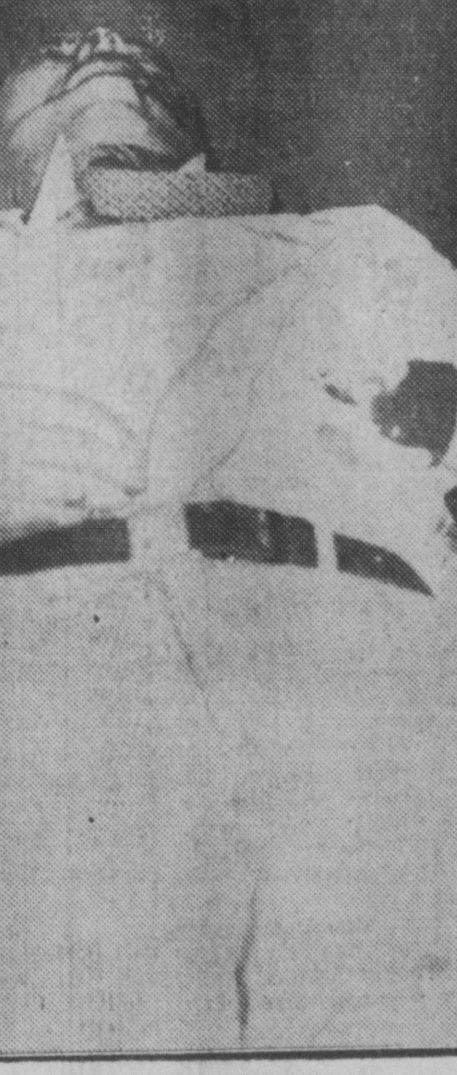

The scorching heat wave, which has spread a staggering toll of deaths and crop ruin throughout the nation, will become more intense in Ohio today ending the brief respite from high temperatures yesterday, according to government weather forecasters.

However, the mercury will not reach as high as it did on Saturday and Sunday when it smashed thermometers and set new all-time records.

While there was a noticeable lowering of temperatures during the past 24 hours, deaths from heat prostration still were reported and the toll for the state since the wave started had reached at least 50 today.

Cincinnati, which baked under a temperature of 104 again yesterday, has had 22 deaths from the heat and drownings. Columbus reported five, Hamilton 3, Cleveland 2, Greenville 2, and other scattered cities, including Ironton, Troy, Marietta and Tiffin, each reported one death.

OUTLAW TO REST NEAR STATESMEN

INDIGNANT INDIANANS OPPOSE BURIAL BESIDE FAIRBANKS, MARSHALL

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 24.—The pendulum of public sympathy swung quickly today in support of the efforts of 70-year-old John W. Dillinger, Sr., to give his son, the notorious outlaw, a Christian burial.

Cemetery custodians were swamped with calls from indignant citizens who objected to the slay of John Dillinger resting in the burial plot where at least two vice presidents of the United States, Charles W. Fairbanks and Thomas Marshall, several statesmen and other dignitaries were buried at Crown Hill cemetery.

But the last cell of John Dillinger, in the earth, and near that of his mother, Mrs. Mollie Dillinger, was assured when Hugh McK. Landon, president of the Indianapolis cemetery ruled that he could be buried there.

The stony coldness of the state and city police melted today when it was decided that the strong arm of the law Fair had been raised against the outlaw in life would protect him from the curious in death.

A motorcycle escort will accompany the body of the slain outlaw from the home of his sister, Mrs. Audrey Haack, in Maywood, across the city to the Crown Hill cemetery. Police estimated that the funeral would be attended by not less than 15,000 curious persons and were prepared to cope with the crowd.

HUGE REWARD, LOVE RIVALRY DEATH CAUSES?

CLAIMS TWO EX-CONVICTS, WOMAN KIN OF FORMER GANGSTER, LAID TRAP

BODY GOES 'HOME'

Aged Father to Accompany Son's Body

CHICAGO, July 24.—While the bullet-pierced body of John Dillinger was prepared today for a 200 mile trip in a hearse it was disclosed that two ex-convicts and the mysterious 'woman in red' sold out America's super-outlaw for the reward money and to avenge an old love rivalry.

Through a wall of secrecy maintained by federal sleuths came reports that "the woman in red," who was with Dillinger as he left the Biograph theater to be ambushed and slain, was under heavy guard to prevent gangdom vengeance.

CLAIMED BY FATHER
In a hearse brought here from his home town, Mooresville, Ind., by the aged farmer-father of the desperado, Dillinger's remains today were to be taken to Maywood, suburb of Indianapolis for the funeral services. He will be buried in Crown Hill cemetery beside the bodies of his mother and step mother.

Dillinger's slaying had hardly been pronounced "justifiable homicide" by a coroner's jury before federal investigators under Melvin Purvis, chief of the department of investigation here, took steps to trap the remaining five members of Dillinger's ruthless gang of outlaws still at liberty.

Their weakness for women, the same which lured Dillinger himself into the range of federal agents' guns, will be employed to trap the five, George "Baby Face" Nelson, Homer Van Meter, Joseph Barry, John Hamilton and Joseph Burns.

Her name had been secret and even the fact that she is being held denied by federal investigators. "The woman in red," according to well founded reports is either a sister or the wife of a former Dillinger gangster.

Her motives for putting "the finger" on the desperado were to gain the reward money expected to aggregate $15,000 and to obtain leniency for a male relative who is reported to be charged with mail robbery.

HAD STOLEN GIRL
In the naming of two ex-convicts—Fred Brennan and Clifford Mohler—as having taken a part in the betrayal it was reported that one of them had co-operated in bringing about Dillinger's death because the outlaw had stolen another hoodlum's girl.

The two ex-convicts had worked with Dillinger in the shirt factory at the Michigan City, Ind., penitentiary. They were last reported to be living in East Chicago, Ind., whence came Police Capt. Tim O'Neill and five other officers Sunday with the definite information that Dillinger was to view the gangland motion picture, "Manhattan Melodrama" at the Biograph.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE RESUMES TONIGHT

Paced by a shortstop named Allen who did everything that any infielder could do, the Laurelville team defeated the fast-stepping Given Oil outfit Monday evening to win by a 7-3 score.

Allen, who has been playing hard ball, turned in a real performance.

The Givens have not "keyed" up for the game but whether they were or whether they were not they took a neat whipping.

The softball loop will resume this evening with Eshelman Feeds playing the McClarren Meats. The Meats were not able to put a full team on the field last week but it is hoped nine players of the list originally turned in by Manager Tate McClarren will be available this evening.

LOST ONLY ONE
The Feeds have not dropped out of the league race because they have lost one game. It is still possible that the Circleville Oils ride

Wednesday evening the Container Corporation, out of action for a week because of a postponement, takes on the Circle City dairy team. Just who Manager Norris will have in his lineup is not known. The dairymen have a strong team, that is on paper, but when the game starts something usually happens to put the club up in the air.

Thursday finds the Circleville Oils defeating their first place percentage against the much-improved Purina Chows. Boasting one of the best infield combinations in the loop the Chows will not be easy picking for the oil-men.

MECCA-GIVENS MEET
Friday evening will find the Mecca restaurant and Given Oils meeting in an important fray. Both teams have lost one game and a defeat would put either out of the race for second half honors. The Mecca will not have its full strength ready but will present a powerful batting array. Both Mart Hickey and Merle Davis are in camp but Jaggy Davis will probably be transferred to shortstop from third. Weller will play third and Mettler will come in from the garden to play second base originally held by Merle Davis.

First regarded as something annoying but not serious the Giants checked up today to find that they had faced the pitching of the Deans, Jerome and Paul, seven times this season in their engagements with the St. Louis Cardinals

Starting out in big time with the Indianapolis Indians Hodapp, son of a Cincinnati funeral director, was bought before long by the Cleveland Indians and it was with Cleveland that he did his best ball playing—He started there as a third baseman and played several years at that position—Hodapp was always known as a clouter  Then came the advent of Willie Kamm to the Cleveland team and Hodapp was transposed into a second baseman, and he played the best ball of his career there—He led the American league in batting in 1930 with a .376 mark ***

THEN HE STARTED TO SLIP and found himself with Boston—Released by the 1933 season he signed with Columbus during the winter and was expected to become a sensation in the association which was to be a stepping stone back to the big show—A sore arm and a knee injury caused his release by Columbus although he hit well—He drifted to Rochester and now he's in the southland ***

18TH OF SEASON
While lacking his usual effectiveness in yielding 10 hits, Jerome Dean beat the Giants yesterday, 6 to 5 for his fourth win over them, his 10th straight mound victory and his 18th of the season. Which, is pitching, even if it's done with mirrors. Brother Paul has beaten the Terrymen in three other engagements.

The defeat had its serious aspects for another reason since the second place Chicago Cubs belted the good ol' Brooklyn Dodgers for a 5-3 decision to cut a full game into the Giants' lead. They are now but two games out of first place.

The third place Cards didn't hurt themselves either when Dean fanned eight of the Giants to win his game. The victory marked their eighth in 13 games with the Giants this season and enabled them to whittle a full game into the Giants' lead, reducing it to three where it had been four.

CADDIES WIN 2 GOLF CLUBS

Joe Jenkins Sinks Approach To Win Fifth Place in Tourney With Bob Friece.

An approach sunk from the far side of a sand trap in a play-off with three other teams won fifth place for Joe Jenkins and Bob Friece, Pickaway Country club caddies in a district caddy tournament at Rose Run course, Columbus, Monday.

Jenkins sunk the ball to win the fifth spot which carried with it two golf clubs.

The local youths playing a one ball twosome finished in a tie for the fifth prize and were forced into the play-off. Jenkins shot came on the first hole of the play-off. Members of the other teams in the play-off were on the green, a par 5, in three while it was Jenkins' turn to shoot his team's fourth stroke. The ball dropped for a Birdie 4 while the other missed their up-puts being forced to take fives.

The champion had not been determined when the locals left the Columbus course four teams playing off for first money. One pair scored a 72 but the tally was questioned and the team was forced to play-off with a team scoring 74 and two teams scoring 75.

The local youths three-putted the last green or they, too, would have gotten into the play-off for first place.

Included in the play-off were a Springfield team, Forrest Drummond and Johnny Brooks of Chillicothe, and Otis Robinson and his partner from Central high, Columbus, who played against the local high school team this spring.

About 120 caddies, 60 twosomes, took part in the tournament.

HUGE REWARD, LOVE RIVALRY DEATH CAUSES?

theater. Capt. O'Neill and Sergt. Martin Zarkovich had negotiated with Mohler, Brennan and the woman to the end that an end to Dillinger's crime career was arranged and an agreement made for payment of the reward.

The first tip concerning Dillinger's general whereabouts and the fact that his penchant for the movies was taken him to the Biograph theater with each change of program came from a Croatian informer, Police Capt. O'Neill revealed.

Bit by bit the trap was laid with the help of information from other hungry for the reward on Dillinger's head.

What part "the woman in red" played in putting the "finger on" the desperado, O'Neill refused to say.

SEE CERTAIN DEATH

Because to reveal the woman's identity would mean an almost certain death at the hands of the five hardened gangsters still at large Purvis and his staff hushed up all mention of any woman. Purvis said:

"I can't say whether the tipster is a man or woman. All I will say is that the information was not given by a sweetheart of Dillinger."

Throwing doubt on the federal denial that "the woman in red" was under guard, was the brief police report of Sergts. James Frawley and Hugh Olsen, who were at the scene of the shooting. It read:

"At about 10:30 Dillinger, with a girl on each arm, came out of the theater.

"The two women companions with him were placed under arrest. We were unable to learn their names."

Bent on discovering a possible cache of some of the thousands of dollars in cash and securities stolen by the Dillinger gang in bank raids in recent months, police and federal agents were combing the territory about the shooting scene for the outlaw's hideout. Dillinger was carrying only $7 and some change when he was shot down.

Two hundred police were cooperating in the search for the hideout which is expected to restore the vast loot taken in wholesale raids on banks throughout the middle west—raids that left a shocking trail of blood in their wake.

Sixteen men were slain in the search for and depredations of the super-outlaw.

Federal agents were meanwhile keeping a close watch over the surgeon who did the "facelifting" operation on Dillinger in attempt to disguise the outlaw. The physician's identity is known, investigators admitted, but his arrest was being delayed in the hope that other members of the Dillinger gang might be traced through him.

Horse in Her Lap

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia.—Imagine finding a horse sitting in your lap! This was the experience of Mrs. Abram Stolozs. Her husband drove along the road with her sitting beside him. The car struck a horse. The impact threw the animal over the car's hood and into Mrs. Stolozs' lap. She was cut and bruised but not severely hurt.

"KID" PARTS TO WEDDING ROLES?

Jackie in "The Kid"

Toby Wing

Rumors persist in Hollywood that Jackie Coogan and Toby Wing, born Martha Virginia Wing, already have married, or intend to be in the near future. Jackie, who won fame and fortune as a child actor, playing in "The Kid", "Oliver Twist" and other productions, is staging a comeback in the films as an adult. Toby, regarded as the most beautiful chorus girl in the movie colony, also played child parts in motion pictures some years ago.

COWLEY

put all the three bullets that went through him through him.

I attended the inquest, a hollow formality. But no inquest was ever as hollow as this one. The deputy coroner, in all the deputy majesty of his deputy might inquired who had performed this homicide. He was told that a government agent, properly authorized, had done so.

He bristled up and demanded to know who had fired the slugs which had ended the life of a human being, Dillinger or no Dillinger, a human being who had come to his end with violence in Cook-co. And he was promptly answered. The deceased had come by his premature end at the hands of a duly authorized agent of the United States department of justice. Take it or leave it. He took it.

COULDN'T TELL

I was looking into the face of Samuel A. Cowley. I was sorry that he, being an agent of the department of justice, which is larded with politics, couldn't stand up like the man he is and say: "I killed the rat. It was my job and I did it."

The deputy coroner asked me to see the gun that had killed Dillinger. That was an inspiration—for a deputy coroner. I had thought of it the night before. My first was that Purvis, who had the first chance, had exercised the opportunity and had done it himself.

The sun was rising over Lake Michigan when I got my first crack at Purvis. And I accused (or rather flattered) him of having killed Dillinger. Purvis doesn't say much, ever. But he doesn't lie. I don't ask much, but I don't believe anybody. So I said, "Let me see your gun." He produced it. Purvis is a hot government agent, he turns in results, but he isn't, as a man who knows gun-men would know, a natural gunman. He produced his gun. It had not been fired. I doubt if it has ever been fired.

Dillinger's gun lay on the desk. It had not been fired. In truth, that safety catch was locked like the gun of a suburban householder who buys a weapon in the nearest hardware store and prays that he will never have to use it. There were some other federal dicks around. The sun was rising and they knocked off John Dillinger. It wasn't a bad night's work. Purvis was the chief and he showed his gat, so in that careless and carefree way that old reporters take on, I addressed them en masse and asked them to show theirs. One agent, not knowing exactly who I was or why he shouldn't do it, pulled his .45. Dillinger hadn't been shot with that kind of a bullet. I didn't look around morgues for 20 years and not know that. I sneered. The other boys came out with their cannons—all but Cowley.

lumbus made no formal investigation of the pipe line company in view of the rate anticipated in the final settlement of the fight with the Columbus Gas Co., but stated he was told W. H. Phipps, head of the Universal, is considered a reputable attorney.

BOTHER OHIO FUEL?

Butler sought information from the Columbus attorney in response to a tip emanating from Columbus, but not from the gas company, to the effect that the pipe line company had made its offer for the purpose of bothering the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

The solicitor, after a long distance telephone conversation with Columbus, said he could understand how the offer might bother the existing company, but added he saw no possibilities for the working of insincerity.

"If the Universal could not furnish gas at 45c here, no other company would be interested in purchasing the contract for that figure," the solicitor explained.

LARGER POTATO CROP REPORTED

But Crop is Five Per Cent Smaller Than 1927 To 1931 Average.

So far this season, about a fourth more potatoes are being shipped north from the early and intermediate states, than were shipped last year. The crop in all sections of the country is larger than it was a year ago.

July 1 estimates by federal government crop reporters, place the prospective crop at 348 million bushels. This is nine per cent smaller than the average crop produced in the years 1927 through 1931.

Expansion in potato production is set at 28 million bushels. Of this increase, the 11 early states are contributing about nine million bushels, and the seven intermediate states about eight million bushels. The 30 states that produce the bulk of the potatoes are responsible for the balance of the increase, which is 11 million bushels.

The larger crop comes as a result of an increased acreage, reported by farmers at six per cent larger than the acreage harvested last season.

bank by the strange men, suspected a holdup was in progress and proceeded to quietly spread an alarm.

Several business men, armed with shotguns and pistols, waited at points of vantage and when the bandits emerged from the bank let go a volley of bullets.

The bandits quickly shielded themselves with their hostages and returned the fire, slightly wounding Harold Litterell. The bandits then herded their captives into their car and sped away amid a hail of bullets, the vigilante business men directing their fire as to least endanger the safety of the hostages.

One of the bandits was believed to have been wounded.

White-collared office workers struggled to feed and water the cattle.

STRAGGLERS KILLED

From the striker's viewpoint they chose the most opportune time for the walkout. The influx of cattle was so great stragglers had to be shot.

Never before have there been so great a number of cattle in the yards, the usual quota being far surpassed by the presence of 42,000 head belonging to the government, shipped in from drought areas.

Byrd Party Halted, Returns to Its Base

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 24.—(INS) — (Via Mackay radio)—Balked by deep snows which buried the flags marking the trail, the Tractor expedition which set out last Friday for the Boiling advance base where Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd has been spending the winter months alone, was enroute back to the main base here today.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, in command of the tractor expedition, decided to turn back after it had required more than 100 miles of zig-zag traveling over the ice and snow fields to reach the half-way point fifty miles from Little America. Beyond the half-way mark the trail ran through a broken ice field full of dangerous crevasses. To attempt to traverse it without the aid of the flags planted last fall by the advance parties would have been extremely hazardous.

Wolcast is Charged With Vet's Robbery

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Accused of robbing a World War veteran after administering "knockout drops," Midget Wolcast, 24, recognized as flyweight boxing champion in some states, was arrested here today.

The fighter, whose real name is Joseph Loscalzo, was placed in custody on the complaint of Joseph Manning, 40, who charged that Wolcast had stolen his $300 bonus money, Manning recently returned from California where he was a patient in a sanitarium.

BERRY CROP SLIM

PORTLAND, Ore.—Some 10,000 huckleberry pickers, including hundreds of Yankima Indians, will find the picking slim around the base of Mount Adams where nature has provided thousands of acres of wild huckleberry patches. Late frosts have destroyed practically all of the crop. The Yakima tribes, who always make pilgrimages to the huckleberry fields, will stay at home this season.

PROFITABLE RAIN

McGREGOR, Ia.—It rained a tenth of an inch here early in the day of the American Legion's annual celebration. The rain in no way hampered the festivities. However, the Legion had an insurance policy calling for payment of $500 to cover expenses in case of rain. So it shattered the old saying that "you can't have your cake and eat it."

The Touring Throng

PROBABLY more than half of the 25,000,000 persons who own automobiles, take more or less extended vacation trips in them. Even if they get no regular vacation, somehow they manage to sneak out a few days. And how they do burn up the mileage, to reach some distant objective.

Our fathers thought it rather wonderful, if they went off somewhere for 100 miles. Their sons think nothing of thousands of miles in the gas buggy. This ease of locomotion is said to have planted the bug of restlessness in our minds. It is complained that people are no longer willing to sit down in peace and quiet reflection, and settle the affairs of the world as they talk contemplatively with their neighbors.

Perhaps not, yet these touring folks get new ideas. They see finished towns, where people abolish disorder, where shapely trees, ever blooming flowers, clean nice homes, testify to high standards. If a fellow returns from such a trip to a poorly painted house, a weedy lawn and a dirty backyard, he deserves a good attack of mental nausea. He should refuse to rest until he has given the slovenly old dry bones of that unsightly place a terrific rattling.

Also if he keeps up this touring habit, he will be changed. The cities he visits will present a panorama of new homes, new shops, new stores, progress in the culture of beauty. That sight should stir the fire of ambition in his perhaps too sluggish mind. He should see that there is plenty of success to be had in this country, by those who reach for it.

Why does a genius marry a dull woman? Because no smart one would live with a genius.

General Strike Fails

EVENTS in San Francisco are proving that general strikes have no place in the United States.

William Green, president of the American federation of labor, was a little late with his statement repudiating the strike. Had his assertion that the federation "neither ordered the strike nor authorized it" been made earlier, the situation might have been prevented from reaching the dangerous point that it did. The influence of the federation's head, could have been instrumental in preventing the spread of the walkout.

Hardly any doubt remains that the attempted general strike was caused almost entirely by radicals with revolutionary motives. Many of these are aliens subjected to deportation, and Acting Governor Merriam of California has requested the United States attorney general to send them out of the country.

The course followed by the San Francisco movement demonstrates conclusively that conditions in the United States are not the kind that support revolution. There may be unrest and dissatisfaction, but only an insignificant fraction of the people would tolerate any revolutionary steps. The masses remain supporters of law and order.

After the government makes everything else quit being too cheap, it might try its hand on human life.

It is hard to figure the cost of a government contract until the money is appropriated to investigate it.

Age has advantages, even for ladies. They outgrow the idea that sophistication means gin and cigarettes.

People naturally look on the bright side. They remember a famous ancestor and forget the one that was hanged.

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XXXII

She was at that moment petulantly expostulating with Fowler. "But why does the idiot turn up Eighth Avenue? I wanted Mr. Landy to see Fifth. Not only that, but there isn't half so much traffic."

"I'm sorry, Miss Crozier, but the driver is only following my instructions—I should say, your father's. He wants you to stop in and see him on your way home."

"Stop in and see him? Intrude on a business conference? Isn't that what you said prevented his meeting us?"

"I'm afraid I didn't quite tell you the truth; but it was Mr. Crozier's wish that I shouldn't tell the last minute—he didn't want you to worry about him any longer than was unavoidable."

"But why should I worry about him? What do you mean? What has happened?"

"Merely a minor accident, a motor smash-up this morning in which Mr. Crozier was slightly injured. That's the real reason why he couldn't meet you."

"Stop talking to me as if I were a child," Fanno sat forward and placed an imperative hand on Fowler's sleeve. "Tell me what happened, please, instantly—the whole truth. Was Father badly hurt? Is his life in danger?"

"No, I'm happy to say—just a little shaken up, aside from several painful but not serious cuts from broken glass. The driver of a motor bus lost control of the wheel as your father's car was passing, and crashed into it full-tilt. The car is a total loss, and the chauffeur had to be rushed to the Polyclinic Hospital; but Mr. Crozier is resting comfortably in the Hotel Bellamy."

"Where? I never heard of the place."

"A residential hotel near the Park, just off Broadway. Because the accident occurred at the corner, they took your father into the hotel for first-aid treatment, and telephoned me. I at once got Dr. Greyson on the wire; he was at your father's side before I could get up town, and he advised that it would be better to let him rest where he was for a day or so, till he recovered from the shock. But you can judge for yourself how slight his injuries really are, when I tell you it will be possible for you to see him immediately."

"I'm thankful for that." A sobered Fanno sat back and visibly took measure to reassert the poise she had lost. "I'm thankful, too, I shall see him before Mother does—she is such a fuss-budget, when anybody she cares about is ill—and be able to break the news to her myself."

"I ought to be the thankful one." The secretary had a nervous smirk. "I don't mind telling you I'm rather afraid of your mother."

"She has a temper," Fanno admitted. "But she never means any harm." The girl was thoughtful for a while. "I do hope you're not unduly roused to say to Fowler, 'with the blessed idea of breaking it to me gently.'"

"No, I assure you, Miss Crozier," the man earnestly protested; "if you asked me, I should say there's no real reason why your father should be in the Hotel Bellamy at all. But then I'm not his personal physician."

"And don't get paid, you mean, for making him think he's got to be handled like old glass by the only one in all the world who knows how to do it. Oh, well! I suppose doctors must live. All the same, Mother lands. You don't mind, I hope," she added, remembering Maurice, "letting me say good night at this hotel instead of our house?"

"I shan't mind in the least, mademoiselle, if that is your wish; but if there is no objection," Maurice urged, "I should be grateful for leave off with you till you make sure all is well with your father, and it is all right for you to go home. Laugh at me if you like—I have set my heart on saying au'voir to you at your own door."

How perfectly silly and dear of you! Fanno, laughing, let a gloved hand rest an instant on the boy's, making it plain that the presence of the others meant nothing to her—she didn't care how they might interpret that frank gesture of affection. "Of course, if you prefer."

"Thank you."

A deepened stain of sardonic humor in the guard's stare earned a blank gaze of disdain, as much as to say: "Who the devil are you, that I should mind what you may have the impertinence to think?" Then again Maurice ignored the animal. Not only could he afford to, but he had more important things to think about—Fowler's anxious manner, for one, that Fanno seemed to have overlooked.

Ever since their departure from the pier had thrown him into closer association with the man, Maurice had been quietly cognizant of the secretary's secret fretting, which betrayed itself in a dozen ill-dissembled symptoms—in unsteadiness of the eyes, a pallid forgery of a smile as inconstant as starlight on troubled waters, an over-eager attentiveness to Fanno that was enough to make one think the fellow felt his very life hung on his success in anticipating her every thought.

And reading these symptoms now to mean that Fowler was deliberately misleading Fanno in respect to the injuries her father had sustained, Maurice was glad that he had so easily contrived to get his way.

If she was in for a bad time, it was his part, as he saw it, to be at hand for her to turn to when she felt the need of sympathy and of comforting by some one who really cared—as he, Maurice, cared.

Odd, it seemed to him, that he who was so well versed in the psychology of love, who was accustomed to view its phenomena with such a coolly sophisticated eye, should find himself caring so much in this special instance; that he, than whom no one knew better that love doesn't last, should find himself taking this love of the time being as if it meant life and death. Odd, yet, that he should be content to be so imbecile!

The traffic on Eighth Avenue, thin and fluent enough south of Thirty-fourth Street, grew thick above that point, and went haltingly. North of Forty-second the taxicab, wedged into a vast confusion of its kind with private cars and commercial vehicles of every description, was constrained to a snail's pace that visibly wore on Fanno, shut off her conversation and caused her to work fretful hands together. Attempts to divert her were all unavailing; but if her responses were vague, her tone flat with preoccupation, the glances she gave the boy from time to time told that she appreciated and thanked him for his well-meant efforts. To counterbalance this, he found the attitude of the safe-deposit man, the bold stare he had had for the girl whenever he wasn't keeping a watchful eye on the traffic or favoring Maurice with more offensive omissions, ever more offensive.

As for Mr. Fowler, his unhappiness was growing momentarily more difficult to hide, so that Maurice wondered much at Fanno's continued failure to observe it.

It was a relief when the cab at last pulled in to a curb where a bronze metal canopy blazoned to the night a fiery headline: HOTEL BELLAMY. Here the secretary, having helped Fanno to alight, hurried her into and through a garish lobby, leaving the others to follow with the luggage. A porter who made to pounce on the two small bags was snarled at by the guard in such effect that he cringed as if from a blow. The party thus effected a swift passage to the elevators, yet one that was not so swift as to prevent the registering of a notion that Fowler, in giving this title of a "residential hotel," had been charitable if not naive.

Men who live by their wits learn to grade hotels at a glance; and Maurice hadn't lived by his all his life to be deceived as to the right rating of the Bellamy; it was by every sign he knew third-class at best; it wouldn't surprise him in the least to be told that its fame was questionable. Something ambiguous grinned behind that notorious mask of gilt and onyx, furtiveness flavored the atmosphere as unmistakably as old undisputed odors of food, perfumery and tobacco. One knew without needing to investigate that there was packed dirt in ever corner, and a staff incurably broadminded.

Above-stairs he marked more evidences of a cynical attitude on the part of the management, but marked them absently with a mind that was now further mystified by the circumstance that it had been thought necessary to quarter the patient in the topmost story. But perhaps the air was better at that elevation.

Fowler led directly to a door at one end of the twelfth-floor corridor, threw it open without knocking, stood back that Fanno might precede him, and followed her in. Maurice an instant later discovered the girl in the act of acknowledging the introduction of a dapper elderly person in a morning coat with striped trousers, spats and be-ribboned pince-nez complete.

"Dr. Kastner, the house physician."

"Good evening, Miss Crozier. It is an honor." The measured voice of authority was in good accord with the aplomb of a finished actor on my rounds. Two minutes more, and you wouldn't have caught me," Fanno was too much concerned for her father to think of challenging that statement, but Maurice inclined to believe that the physician had been waiting some time to way-lay the girl and ingratiate himself with her. There was a reek of smoke in the air, together with a distinct aroma of spirits: several cigarette-ends, one still smoldering, two used glasses and a siphon of charged water, dressed a plain metal tray on the table in the middle of the room. There was, however, no bottom in evidence, nor any of the physician's hypothetical drinking-companion.

"But how is my father?"

"Resting quite comfortably, I'm glad to say."

"There isn't any reason, then, why I shouldn't see him? I mean, at once. It won't upset him too much?"

"On the contrary, it will do him good, I'm sure. Permit me—"

Kastner crossed to and opened the door to the adjoining room, of which Maurice could see only a corner with a bureau by a window, and waited to bow Fanno through.

"I'm coming, too," Fowler hastily put in, "if you don't mind, Miss Crozier."

"Please do." The girl flashed Maurice a smile over her shoulder.

"You won't mind waiting, I know. And I don't suppose I shall be a great while."

"May as well take this along, I suppose. By your leave!" Fowler caught up the overnight case which the guard had put down on a chair. "Mr. Crozier is sure to want to see the emeralds."

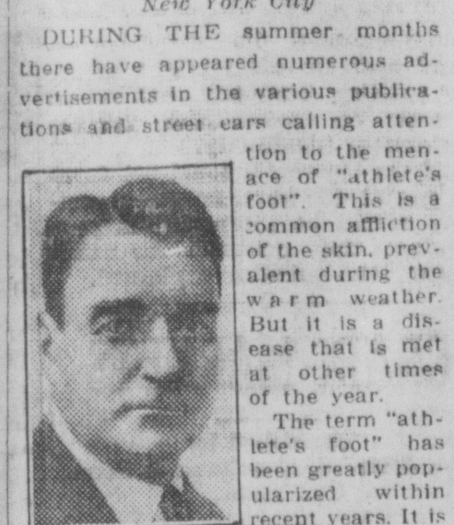

To this the guard returned, "Oh, yeah?" in an ironic drawl which Maurice found most perplexing; if the free-and-easy ways of the American proletariat were traditional, this impertinence passed a Continental's understanding; still, the fellow seemed quite content to surrender custody of the treasure, and the secretary made off with it so smartly that he all but jostled Dr. Kastner through the doorway.

Ringworm Is Common in Summer

Authority Gives Some Facts About This Contagious "Itch"

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

Dr. Copeland

DURING the summer months there have appeared numerous advertisements in the various publications and street cars calling attention to the menace of "athlete's foot." This is a common affliction of the skin, prevalent during the warm weather. But it is a disease that is met at other times of the year.

The term "athlete's foot" has been greatly popularized within recent years. It is an infection of the skin, not necessarily confined to the foot or to athletes. The disease sometimes afflicts athletes, but is equally prevalent among all persons exposed to the causative fungus or germ.

Doctors glory in big names. Among themselves the fungus is called "trichophyton" and the disease is known as "dermatomycosis trichophytina." This ailment is as annoying as its name. It may occur anywhere on the body, but as a rule is found on the face, hands, neck, forearms, soles of the feet and in the skin between the toes.

In a characteristic case the inflammation appears on the skin in a ring-like formation. Indeed, it is known by another name, "ring worm." The inflammation begins as a flat, reddish spot, then enlarges, becomes colored in the center, having a silver-ring-like appearance. The ring itself is elevated, reddened and scaly.

The outer border is usually darker than the inner border. As a rule, the center of the ring is pale, pinkish or almost identical with the color of the skin. The inflammation persists for several days or weeks, then disappears, only to reappear elsewhere on the body.

Unfortunately, not all cases are alike and not all resemble the description here given. Sometimes it may be difficult to recognize the nature of the infection. In many instances, watery blisters form on the skin, the inflammation itches and is extremely annoying.

The disease is highly contagious and quickly spreads from one individual to another. For this reason it is of the utmost importance that necessary medical attention be obtained and every effort made to prevent its spread. During the summer months at the public beach or in the swimming pool a sufferer from ringworm is a menace to other bathers. Fortunately, public health authorities have realized this danger and enforce the sterilization of towels, swimming pools and bath houses. I am glad to say that this has greatly decreased the cases of ringworm.

Never neglect any inflammation or infection of the skin. If you notice intense itching of the skin, with blisters, especially between the toes, or if there is redness and cracking of the skin between the toes, suspect ringworm.

Do not apply any preparation without first consulting with your physician. Bear in mind that what is good for one person may be harmful for another.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

But in shaking the dust of Washington, Terrell wants it known that he is not doing so because of fear.

His one-term on Capitol Hill has quenched his thirst for political glory. And as for voting against the President's appropriations, in Terrell's opinion he was acting in the best Texas tradition.

To prove this he cites the case of O. M. Roberts, one-time Governor of the Lone Star State. Roberts was bitterly assailed for his rigid economizing. Finally a delegation of irate State legislators called on him.

"Governor," they said, "you will send the State to hell by your niggardly policy."

"If the State goes to hell," Roberts shot back, "she will go according to law and pay her way as she goes."

BOULANGER AT PARK

Beginning Saturday, Charlie Boulanger's famed Columbia Broadcasting orchestra opens for a week's engagement in the Moonlight garden at Orléans Park, Columbus.

Because it has the amusements of a complete resort—a large swimming pool, athletic field, horseshoe courts, children's playgrounds, wrestling matches and moving pictures—Orléans park has become a popular spot, with out-of-town people for family reunions, fraternal meetings and employee outings.

42,900 people visited the park on Plymouth Day, 32,000 attended the Columbus Dispatch picnic.

It is easy to make the best people call on you. Just get a cold and don't shave for three days.

CHILDREN'S PARTY AT COUNTRY CLUB

Small children of members of the Pickaway Country Club took possession of the club grounds Tuesday morning as they joined in a children's party, the first of its kind to be sponsored by the house committee.

Games and various contests were enjoyed during the morning by approximately 30 little guests and at 11:30 a. m. a delectable lunch was served by the committee in charge.

Responsible for the success of the affair were the following members of the committee: Mrs. Clark Will, Misses Katherine Foreman, Rosemary Jackson, Ellen Bennett, Charlotte Moore and Jane Mader.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS AT HOME OF MRS. MARCY

Mrs. Gilbert Edgington, S. Court-st., was a substituting guest when Mrs. Delos Marcy entertained her two-table bridge club at her home in Williamsport, Monday evening.

Following several rounds of play, the score tallies were added and the winners were found to be Miss Esther Drum, Mrs. Edgington and Miss Pauline Hill. Delectable refreshments were served late in the evening.

Miss Wilmina Phebus entertains the club in two weeks.

John W. Richards, headmaster of Lake Forest academy, Lake Forest, Ill., was the guest over Sunday of Frank Fischer and Foster Bales.

The person who mutilated seats in the Cliftona Theatre is asked to call at the theatre this evening and settle for the damages.

This person is known by the management, and if no appearance is made, such person will be prosecuted.

Radium in Bulgaria

SOFIA—A new supply of radium has been discovered in Bulgaria. Recently minerals containing uranium and radium were discovered near the village of Streltscha. A foreign company applied for prospectors' licenses, but the government wishing to await the results of its own survey, denied the application.

CAMPERS RETURN, MORE TO ATTEND

Miss Evelyn Hill, of Darbyville, Winona Peters of St. Paul, Harold Riffe of Pickaway-twp., John Peters of Lockbourne, and Miss Mary Shortridge, county club leader, have returned from a week's training at southwest district camp for elder 4-H club members and leaders. These young people were sent by the Pickaway-co Farm bureau.

Camp Clifton is situated near Yellow Springs, in Greene-co. The locality is not unlike that of Old Man's Cave in Hooking-co. Here the boys and girls are given careful instruction in vesper and camp fire programs in leather work, basketry, in making equipment for games, in conducting games, in music and musical games and folk dancing, in nature study and also in bed making and dish washing. At least two hours a day were spent in discussion by members of various clubs. These discussions tended to help many a member and young leader over some difficulty in his own club. Faculty members for this camp consisted of extension workers from Ohio State university, agent's and home demonstration agents.

Guy Dowdy, former agent of Pickaway-co was director of the camp.

Beginning Monday, July 30th, a camp of one week's duration will be conducted for the regular members of Pickaway- Fayette, Clark and Champaign counties. A large attendance is expected. The cost per camper is $4. This camp will be directed by C. E. Rowland, agent of Clark-co.

Any Pickaway-co 4-H Club member or leader wishing to go to camp should get in touch with Mary Shortridge at once.

FRUIT MEN PLAN STATE WIDE MEET

Horticulture Society Chooses Milford Center Orchard For Sessions.

Plans have been completed for a state wide meeting of fruit growers on the farm of the Ohio Orchard Company at Milford Center, Thursday, August 16. C. E. Dutton, manager, will be the host. The occasion is the annual summer meeting of the Ohio State Horticultural Society.

The orchards, located centrally in the state, comprise about 120 acres in full bearing. A crop of about 40,000 bushels is in prospect, of which about 25,000 bushels can be stored on the farm. Much of the marketing is done at the farm. Morning of the day will be devoted to tours of the orchards. In the afternoon several speakers will be heard, including Mr. Dutton and H. D. Hootman, secretary of the Michigan State Horticultural society.

UNUSUAL PRACTICES

Several unusual orcharding practices are employed by the Ohio Orchard Company, according to F. H. Beach, secretary of the society. The orchard is equipped for irrigation. Water is distributed by the ooze hose method. Early varieties of apples that had been irrigated are now topping the Columbus and Cleveland markets.

One feature of the farm is a completely equipped building for cider manufacture. The tractors, cultivating equipment, sprayers, trucks, sizing, grading and packing equipment will be on display. Most of the spraying is done with a 50 gallon per minute outfit mounted on a balloon-tired truck. This rig will be demonstrated.

The society this year is holding but one summer meeting. In the past two have been held, one in the northern part of the state and the other in the southern part. On the following day the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station at Wooster will be visited for orchard day.

ARE YOU interested in a good, dependable gas service at a fair rate or an unknown, untried, blue-sky service at a cheap rate?

Reliable natural gas service isn't just an overnight happenstance. It has taken forty years of plant building and production development to give the quality of assurance to your gas service which seems so commonplace to you now. The greatest guarantee of service is a record of performance.

No city has better gas service than this one now has. Only cities committing a similar folly can have service so poor as this one, once it has fallen for the empty promise of promoters. When you need medical service, you see a physician. When you need legal advice you see a lawyer. When you want plumbing you see a plumber. Why, when you want good gas service, don't you rely on gas men?

It doesn't take much in the way of resources to talk cheap gas. Is it even plausible to expect that promoters without gas experience or tangible resources can furnish dependable service at cheap rates, when this company—backed by the greatest natural gas resources in the world—cannot maintain dividends because of present inadequate rates and increasing costs?

If a "bird in the hand is worth two in the bush," isn't a gas service that is real, worth a lot more than promotion promises?

Government Uses Ocean Mail Contracts as Levers to Settle Strike

WASHINGTON — One and one make two—in strikes as well as in mathematics. Last Tuesday, at the height of the San Francisco general strike, the White House suddenly announced that Roosevelt had empowered Postmaster-General Jim Farley to investigate ocean mail contracts and cancel or modify any he considered unwarranted.

Two days later Big Jim, junketing leisurely about the Far West with a pocket full of political speeches, abruptly galvanized into action and revealed he was going to the Golden Gate City as an "arbitrator."

Two apparently unrelated incidents. But behind the scenes they were parts of a very carefully considered secret strategy by means of which the administration hoped to bring industrial peace to the strife-torn West Coast community.

These are the facts on which this program is predicated. FACT NO. 1: The Postoffice Department annually ladles out $26,000,000 in the form of ocean mail subsidies to American shipping lines. If this mail were transported on a poundage basis it would cost the government around $3,000,000.

FACT NO. 2: Everyone of the six big shipping companies involved in the protracted maritime workers controversy which led to the general strike, is a heavy recipient of this lush government largesse.

FACT NO. 3: Secretary Perkins, General Johnson and Assistant Secretary McGrady, Chairman of the Federal Longshoremen's Board, consider these companies basically responsible for the failure of a peace agreement.

The Government has legal power to crack down on these juicy contracts. The conclusion is obvious.

Strike Lesson

San Francisco's general strike has served to impress one lesson on New Deal labor authorities; namely that local appointees, no matter how worthy, liberal, and highly esteemed, do not make effective arbiters.

It all gets down to the old truism that "Familiarity breeds contempt." Experience has shown that these local selections, even when invested with the cloak of Federal power, rarely do as well as outside officials. Personal relations, friendships, other factors of a similar character, are on intangible, but potent, bar to forceful and decisive action.

Labor Secretary Perkins and Chairman Lloyd Garrison, of the New Labor Adjustment Board, privately are agreed on this fact. As a result two important changes are destined:

1. In recommending future members to Federal arbitration bodies, Miss Perkins can be expected to avoid local selections as much as possible.

2. The system of regional labor boards, which the Labor Adjustment Board inherited from the liquidated National Labor Board, is to be drastically overhauled.

These regional agencies, made up entirely of local appointees have been a complete failure in handling really serious labor disputes. Garrison's plans for reorganizing the system are still tentative. But the proposal being given serious consideration is that the present boards be slashed to one permanent member, to handle routine matters, with the membership to be expanded by the appointment of experienced federal officials in the event of a serious controversy.

On the other hand, it is possible, that after further study the entire set-up may be junked.

HOSTAGE STILL HELD

Three Others Freed After $4,000 Robbery.

OXFORD, Kan., July 24.—Bandits believed to be Ray Hamilton, Joe Palmer and Blackie Thompson, who escaped from the Texas state prison Sunday, and a fourth man, robbed the Oxford state bank of $4,000 today, speeding out of town in a hail of bullets with four hostages.

Three of the captives, Homer Jester, cashier of the bank; Daisy Bay, a bookkeeper, and Marion Carson, lumber company employee, were released a short distance from Oxford, but P. E. Donley, assistant cashier of the bank, still was held by the bandits and fears were felt for his safety.

SPEED TO OKLAHOMA

A posse led by Undersheriff Holt endeavored to pick up the trail of the bandit car, said to have been a dark Ford V-8 sedan bearing Oklahoma license plates. The car was headed south out of Oxford and it was presumed the desperadoes were making for the Oklahoma state line, nineteen miles away.

The bandits seized Donley as he approached the bank and compelled him to open the door. One of the bandits stood guard outside the bank while the others were inside looting the place of an undetermined amount of cash.

Jester and Miss Bay were seized as they arrived at the bank and Carson was waylaid by the bandit guard and compelled to get into the bandit car.

NATION'S HEAT TOLL IS PAST FIVE HUNDRED

All Country East of Rockies Suffering; 92 Dead in Chicago

MISSOURI IS HIT

Ohio Lists 50 Known Dead From Intensity

LOCAL WEATHER

The temperature was climbing again today after falling to a comfortable low mark of 66 during the night. At 1:15 p. m., Dr. H. R. Clarke reported his thermometer was at 99 and climbing.

By International News Service

A devastating sun which has taken the shocking toll of more than 500 lives and brought widespread damage to crops while relentlessly pouring heat onto the country east of the Rockies during the past six days was back on the job again today.

The appalling toll of human life and heat prostrations was felt most severely in the middle west

MELONS BURNING UP

Melon growers were fearful today that unless the weather changes at once their crops will be destroyed. The melon crop is one of Pickaway-co's most fruitful during the late summer but the intense heat the past two weeks has done much damage.

although sections of New England and in the southwest were most heavily affected by the ever increasing drought.

A total of 92 persons have died in Chicago since the record breaking heat gripped the city. Twenty-four perished yesterday while C. A. Donnel, weather forecaster, predicted no relief for today, saying he expected the thermometer to reach 100 degrees.

156 DEAD IN MISSOURI
Deaths were most numerous in Missouri where the tragic total of 156 lives have been claimed by the searing heat. In Kansas City alone, 59 persons have perished in the last eight days. Ten more fatalities yesterday as the thermometer reached 104. Iowa faced additional destruction of life and crops after 13 deaths yesterday.

In St. Louis the temperature equalled an all-time record of 109 yesterday, killing 36 persons. Early today the mercury was well into the 90's. Dallas, Tex., faced hotter weather after a maximum of 98 yesterday. Denver's 24-hour maximum was 83, but in Miles City the temperature soared to 100. Showers cooled New Mexico to some extent.

The south was not immune to the man-killing heat. In Louisville yesterday the mercury skyrocketed to 105, killing eight more persons. Farther north, Indiana met with considerable suffering and great loss of life and property.

AT 122 IN INDIANA
An unofficial temperature of 122 degrees was reported in Jeffersonville, while Valparaiso recorded 106. The Wabash river has dwindled to a mere creek in places while several cities reported serious water shortages.

Cincinnati baked under a temperature of 102 yesterday. Fifty deaths have been reported due to heat throughout the state since the week began. Pittsburgh was not seriously affected with a maximum reading of 80 expected today.

Mr. Fickardt's name will be written upon the ballot by members of his party. He needs eight percent of the vote of his party to entitle him a place on the November ballot.

There is no Republican opposition at the primary, at least so far.

Mr. Fickardt, if he obtains the required number of votes, will be the winner of the Earl Hoffman-R.G. Corville-Frank Anderson primary contest.

Cowley, Purvis' Assistant, Named Dillinger's Killer

Credited With Sending All Three Bullets Through Outlaw's Body; All Agents in Morgue Except Cowley Show Unused Revolvers to Reporter.

BY JACK LAIT
Copyright, 1934, By International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The man who has the deepest notch in his gun in the world is Samuel A. Cowley. He is the man who killed John Dillinger. Cowley is first assistant to Melvin Purvis, chief of the U. S. bureau of the department of justice here.

Agents of the department are traditionally instructed that they must have no individual identities. But no departmental regulations are big enough to obscure in anonymity the man who sent three bullets through the world's most notorious bad man.

STOOD BESIDE COWLEY

I stood beside Cowley last night in the morgue beside the dead body of the man whom he had so well rubbed out.

I got in the morgue through a series of breaks. With me, as a Chicago cop who happened to be under rather dramatic obligations to me.

My copper friend had not been as impressed or as idle as I had been. It was none of his business. He was a finger print expert, and despite the attempt at obliteration, he had Dillinger's deadly marks bevo'd possible conjecture on the who's, how's and deltas in 15 minutes after we got there. I had interviewed Dillinger in the Crown Point jail and didn't need his affirmation—one look, the body still pink as a d'war, and I knew it was Dillinger.

That was easy. The whole world would soon know it was Dillinger. But the bureau of identification must perfect its records, and my friend's copper whose star was pinned right through his heart, was going to hand in a complete and competent report. That was okay. He had his work to do and I had mine.

I didn't have to file my story for a couple of hours. He had to make his report immediately, and it was one word—"yes."

He could have left then and gone back to his girl in whose room he had gotten the quick tip that a man was shot probably Dillinger—and he should beat it—to the morgue.

But I was a reporter in Chicago for many years. And he was my friend. His assignment was cleaned up. Mine wasn't. I stood there, fascinated like a small-town boob on his first obituary.

He was a hard-boiled guy—well, not so very. He moaned around and, presently, he sidled over to me and he said:

TO BE PROMOTED

"You see that guy with the black suit on and the cigar? He's a government dick, and he's going to be promoted."

That didn't particularly interest me. I knew a $125-a-month government dick who turned up a secretary to the president of the United States. So I asked him that could possibly affect my life. And he pulled down the left corner of his mouth very much like Dillinger did when I interviewed him at the Crown Point jail and he said "That's the guy that croaked Dillinger."

I had known him for many years. He had never given me a wrong steer. Melvin Purvis and his Washington chief, J. Edgar Hoover, may think it policy to issue a formidable official denial. Never-the-less, Samuel A. Cowley, not only killed John Dillinger, but

JACKSON, July 23. Herbert Thacker, 21-year-old negro, today had been sentenced to die in the electric chair at the Ohio Penitentiary on November 22 for the brutal murder of Stephen Huntley, an aged reclus, during a robbery which netted him $25.

Thacker was convicted of first degree murder charges two weeks ago. He was calm as Judge Roy Gilman pronounced sentence in contrast to the emotion he exhibited when he testified at his trial.

Harry Freeman, another negro and Thacker's alleged accomplice, was tried on similar charges but the jury disagreed. He will be retried at a later date, county officials said.

CHICAGO, July 24.—While the bullet-pierced body of John Dillinger was prepared today for a 200 mile trip in a hearse it was disclosed that two ex-convicts and the mysterious 'woman in red' sold out America's super-outlaw for the reward money and to avenge an old love rivalry.

Through a wall of secrecy maintained by federal sleuths came reports that "the woman in red," who was with Dillinger as he left the Biograph theater to be ambushed and slain, was under heavy guard to prevent gangdom vengeance.

CLAIMED BY FATHER

In a hearse brought here from his home town, Mooresville, Ind., by the aged farmer-father of the desperado, Dillinger's remains today were to be taken to Maywood, suburb of Indianapolis for the funeral services. He will be buried in Crown Hill cemetery beside the bodies of his mother and step-mother.

Dillinger's slaying had fairly been pronounced "justifiable homicide" by a coroner's jury before federal investigators under Melvin Purvis, chief of the department of investigation here, took steps to trap the remaining five members of Dillinger's ruthless gang of outlaws still at liberty.

Their weakness for women, the same which lured Dillinger into the range of federal guns, will be employed to trap the five, George "Bugs" Moran, Homer Van Meter, Fred Barker, John Hamilton and Joseph Campbell.

Her name held secret for the fact that she is being denied, by federal investigators, "the woman in red," according to well founded reports is either a sister or the wife of a former Dillinger gangster.

Her motives for putting "the finger" on the desperado were to gain the reward money expected to aggregate $15,000 and to obtain leniency for a male relative who is reported to be charged with mail robbery.

HAD STOLEN GIRL

In the naming of two ex-convicts—Fred Brennan and Clifford Mobler—as having taken a part in the betrayal it was reported that one of them had co-operated in bringing about Dillinger's death because the outlaw had stolen another hoodlum's girl.

The two ex-convicts had worked with Dillinger in the shirt factory at the Michigan City, Ind., penitentiary. They were last reported to be living in East Chicago, Ind., whence came Police Capt. Tim O'Neill and five other officers Sunday with the definite information that Dillinger was to view the gangland motion picture, "Manhattan Melodrama," at the Biograph

Indignant Indianans Oppose Burial Beside Fairbanks, Marshall.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 24.—The pendulum of public sympathy swung quickly today in support of the efforts of 70-year-old John W. Dillinger, Sr., to give his son, the notorious outlaw, a Christian burial.

Cemetery custodians were swamped with calls from indignant citizens who objected to the slay John Dillinger resting in the burial plot where at least two vice-presidents of the United States, Charles W. Fairbanks and Thomas Marshall—several statesmen and other dignitaries were buried at Crown Hill cemetery.

But the last call of John Dillinger, in the earth, and near that of his mother, Mrs. Mollie Dillinger, was assured when Hugh McK. Landon, president of the Indianapolis cemetery ruled that he could be buried there.

The stony coldness of the state and city police melted today when it was decided that the strong arm of the law that had been raised against the outlaw in life would protect him from the curious in death.

A motorcycle escort will accompany the body of the slain outlaw from the home of his sister, Mrs. Audrey Hancock, in Maywood, across the city to the Crown Hill cemetery. Police estimated that the funeral would be attended by not less than 15,000 curious persons and were prepared to deal with the crowd.

National Office May Locate Many Women

The National Re-employment office in city hall has a prospective order for 200 women experienced in running work such as sorters, peddlers, etc., and urges that all employed women interested in this kind of work register before August 1 in case the office is called to provide this help.

The office managed by James Shea is open for registration from 8:30 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon every day except Saturday.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE RESUMES TONIGHT

by a shortstop named Allen, who did everything that any player could do, the Laurelville team defeated the fast-stepping Oil outfit Monday evening by a 7-3 score.

Allen, who has been playing baseball, turned in a real performance.

The Givens were not "keyed" up on the game but whether they were or whether they were not they took a neat whipping. The football loop will resume this evening with Eschelman Feeds playing the McClarren Meats. The Meats were not able to put a full team on the field last week but it is hoped nine players of the first originally turned in by Manager Fate McClarren will be available this evening.

LOST ONLY ONE

The Feeds have not dropped out of the league race because they have lost one game. It is still possible that the Circleville Oils ride.

Renew Fight for Mat Title

Fighting to a draw in their title engagement in Boston, Jim London, inset, right, and Ed Don George, inset, left, meet again in Buffalo in an attempt to determine the heavyweight wrestling championship on Aug. 1. Above is a scene from the Boston battle, which ended when the two grapplers, after each had won one fall, were too tired to go on. The Buffalo bout will be a one-fall affair.

Wednesday evening the Contender Corporation, out of action for a week because of a postponement, takes on the Circle City dairy team. Just who Manager Norris will have in his lineup is not known. The dairymen have a strong team, that is on paper, but when the game starts something usually happens to put the club up in the air.

Thursday finds the Circleville Oils defeating their first place percentage against the much-improved Purina Chows. Boasting one of the best infield combinations in the loop the Chows will not be easy picking for the oil-men.

MECCA-GIVENS MEET
Friday evening will find the Mecca restaurant and Given Oils meeting in an important fray. Both teams have lost one game and a defeat would put either out of the race for second half honors. The Mecca will not have its full strength ready but will present a powerful batting array. Both Mart Hickey and Merle Davis are in camp but Jaggy Davis will probably be transferred to shortstop from third. Weller will play third and Mettler will come in from the garden to play second base originally held by Merle Davis.

'DIZZY' DEAN IS NEMESIS

Giants Lose Fourth in Row To Him as Card Hurler Annexes His Eighteenth.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Certain as taxes and rain on a holiday the dean today had cast another funeral pall over the New York Giants, leaving them dazed and wondering for a solution to the one problem which has blighted their otherwise fairly untroubled jaunt toward the National league pennant.

First regarded as something annoying but not serious the Giants checked up today to find that they had faced the pitching of the Deans, Jerome and Paul, seven times this season in their engagements with the St. Louis Cardinals

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

WE READ IN THE PAPERS where Urban John Hodapp, erstwhile baseball player, has been sold "down the river." * * * In fact he's gone to the Knoxville Smokies of the Southern association * * * Hodapp's case is one of the many which follow successful years in the major leagues * * *

Starting out in big time with the Indianapolis Indians Hodapp, son of a Cincinnati funeral director, was bought before long by the Cleveland Indians and it was with Cleveland that he did his best ball playing—He started there as a third baseman and played several years at that position—Hodapp was always known as a clouter * * * Then came the advent of Willie Kamm to the Cleveland team and Hodapp was transposed into a second baseman, and he played the best ball of his career there—He led the American league in batting in 1930 with a .376 mark * * *

THEN HE STARTED TO SLIP and found himself with Boston—Released by that team at the close of the 1933 season he signed with Columbus during the winter and was expected to become a sensation in the association which was to be a stepping stone back to the big show—A sore arm and a knee injury caused his release by Columbus although he hit well—He drifted to Rochester and now he's in the southland * * *

Charley "Midget" Fischer, Columbus, won the light heavyweight crown from Phikie Gardner, Schenectady, N. Y., at Camden, N. J. last night * * *

The report is drifting around that Eddie "Hotcha" Callihan, softball pitcher, has quit the Eschelman team and intends to join another club in the league—Just for Mr. Callihan's information we wish to point out that unless the Feeds give him his release he can play with no one—The rule was made by the managers for just that reason, to prevent a disgruntled ball player from quitting one ball team to play with another * * * and have been beaten seven times.

18TH OF SEASON
While lacking his usual effectiveness in yielding 10 hits, Jerome Dean beat the Giants yesterday, 6 to 5 for his fourth win over them, his 10th straight mound victory and his 18th of the season. Which, is pitching, even if it's done with mirrors. Brother Paul has beaten the Terrymen in three other engagements.

The defeat had its serious aspects for another reason since the second place Chicago Cubs belted the good ol' Brooklyn Dodgers for a 8-3 decision to cut a full game into the Giants' lead. They are now but two games out of first place.

The third place Cards didn't hurt themselves either when Dean fanned eight of the Giants to win his game. The victory marked their eighth in 13 games with the Giants this season and enabled them to whittle a full game into the Giants' lead, reducing it to three where it had been four.

CADDIES WIN 2 GOLF CLUBS

Joe Jenkins Sinks Approach To Win Fifth Place in Tourney With Bob Friece.

An approach sunk from the far side of a sand trap in a play-off with three other teams won fifth place for Joe Jenkins and Bob Friece, Pickaway Country club caddies in a district caddy tournament at Rose Run course, Columbus, Monday.

Jenkins sunk the ball to win the fifth spot which carried with it two golf clubs.

The local youths playing a one ball twosome finished in a tie for the fifth prize and were forced into the playoff. Jenkins shot one on the first hole of the playoff. Members of the other teams in the playoff were on the green, a par 5, in three while it was Jenkins' turn to shoot his team's fourth stroke. The ball dropped for a Birdie 4 while the other missed their up-puts being forced to take fives.

The champion had not been determined when the locals left the Columbus course four teams playing off for first money. One pair scored a 72 but the tally was questioned and the team was forced to play-off with a team scoring 74 and two teams scoring 75. The local youths three-putted the last green or they, too, would have gotten into the playoff for first place.

Included in the playoff were a Springfield team, Forrest Drummond and Johnny Brooks of Chillicothe, and Otis Robinson and his partner from Central high, Columbus, who played against the 10-al high school team this spring.

About 120 caddies, 60, twosomes, took part in the tournament.

HUGE REWARD, LOVE RIVALRY DEATH CAUSES?

theater. Capt. O'Neill and Sgt. Martin Zarkovich had negotiated with Mohr, Brennan and the woman to the end that an end to Dillinger's crime career was arranged and an agreement made for payment of the reward.

The first tip concerning Dillinger's general whereabouts and the fact that his penchant for the movies was taken him to the Biograph theater with each change of program came from a Croatian informer, Police Capt. O'Neill revealed.

But by hit the trap was laid with the help of information from other hungry for the reward on Dillinger's head.

What part "the woman in red" played in putting the "finger on" the desperado, O'Neill refused to say.

SEE CERTAIN DEATH

Because to reveal the woman's identity would mean an almost certain death at the hands of the five hardened gangsters still at large Purvis and his staff hushed up all mention of any woman. Purvis said:

"I can't say whether the tipster is a man or woman. All I will say is that the information was not given by a sweetheart of Dillinger."

Throwing doubt on the federal denial that "the woman in red" was under guard, was the brief police report of Sgt. James Frawley and Hugh Olsen, who were at the scene of the shooting. It read:

"At about 10:30 Dillinger, with a girl on each arm, came out of the theater.

"The two women companions with him were placed under arrest. We were unable to learn their names."

Bent on discovering a possible cache of some of the thousands of dollars in cash and securities stolen by the Dillinger gang in bank raids in recent months, police and federal agents were combing the territory about the shooting scene for the outlaw's hideout. Dillinger was carrying only $7 and some change when he was shot down.

Two hundred police were cooperating in the search for the hideout which is expected to restore the vast loot taken in wholesale raids on banks throughout the middle west—raids that left a shocking trail of blood in their wake.

Sixteen men were slain in the search for and depredations of the super-outlaw.

Federal agents were meanwhile keeping a horse sitting in your lap! This was the experience of Mrs. Abram Stolozos. Her husband drove along the road with her sitting beside him. The car struck a horse. The impact threw the animal over the car's hood and into Mrs. Stolozos' lap. She was cut and bruised but not severely hurt.

Jackie in "The Kid"

Toby Wing

Rumors persist in Hollywood that Jackie Coogan and Toby Wing, born Martha Virginia Wing, already have married, or intend to be in the near future. Jackie, who won fame and fortune as a child actor, playing in "The Kid", "Oliver Twist" and other productions, is staging a comeback in the films as an adult. Toby, regarded as the most beautiful chorus girl in the movie colony, also played child parts in motion pictures some years ago.

put all the three bullets that went through him through him.

I attended the inquest, a hollow formality. But no inquest was ever as hollow as this one. The deputy coroner, in all the deputy majesty of his deputy might inquired who had performed this homicide. He was told that a government agent, properly authorized, had done so.

He bristled up and demanded to know who had fired the slugs which had ended the life of a human being, Dillinger or no Dillinger, a human being who had come to his end with violence in Cook-co. And he was promptly answered. The deceased had come by his premature end at the hands of a duly authorized agent of the United States department of justice. Take it or leave it. He took it.

COULDN'T TELL

I was looking into the face of Samuel A. Cowley. I was sorry that he, being an agent of the department of justice, which is larded with politics, couldn't stand up like the man he is and say: "I killed the rat. It was my job and I did it."

The deputy coroner asked me to see the gun that had killed Dillinger. That was an inspiration—for a deputy coroner. I had thought of it the night before. My first was that Purvis, who had the first chance, had exercised the opportunity and had done it himself.

The sun was rising over Lake Michigan when I got my first crack at Purvis. And I accused (or rather flattered) him of having killed Dillinger. Purvis doesn't say much, ever. But he doesn't lie. I don't ask much, but I don't believe anybody. So I said, "Let me see your gun." He produced it. Purvis is a hot government agent, he turns in results, but he isn't, as a man who knows gun-men would know, a natural gun-man. He produced his gun. It had not been fired. I doubt if it has ever been fired.

Dillinger's gun lay on the desk. It had not been fired. In truth, that safety catch was locked like the gun of a suburban householder who buys a weapon in the nearest hardware store and prays that he will never have to use it. There were some other federal dicks around. The sun was rising and they knocked off John Dillinger. It wasn't a bad night's work. Purvis was the chief and he showed his gat, so in that careless and carefree way that old reporters take on, I addressed them en masse and asked them to show theirs. One agent, not knowing exactly who I was or why he shouldn't do it, pulled his .45. Dillinger hadn't been shot with that kind of a bullet. I didn't look around mortgaged for 20 years and not know that. I sneered. The other boys came out with their cannons—all but Cowley.

BOTHER OHIO FUEL?

Butler sought information from the Columbus attorney in response to a tip emanating from Columbus, but not from the gas company, to the effect that the pipe line company had made its offer for the purpose of bothering the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

The solicitor, after a long distance telephone conversation with Columbus, said he could understand how the offer might bother the existing company, but added he saw no possibilities for the working of insincerity.

"If the Universal could not furnish gas at 45c here, no other company would be interested in purchasing the contract for that figure," the solicitor explained.

LARGER POTATO CROP REPORTED

But Crop is Five Per Cent Smaller Than 1927 To 1931 Average.

So far this season, about a fourth more potatoes are being shipped north from the early and intermediate states, than were shipped last year. The crop in all sections of the country is larger than it was a year ago.

July 1 estimates by federal government crop reporters place the prospective crop at 318 million bushels. This is nine per cent smaller than the average crop produced in the years 1927 through 1931.

Expansion in potato production is set at 28 million bushels. Of this increase, the 11 early states are contributing about nine million bushels, and the seven intermediate states about eight million bushels. The 30 states that produce the bulk of the potatoes are responsible for the balance of the increase, which is 11 million bushels.

The larger crop comes as a result of an increased acreage, reported by farmers at six per cent larger than the acreage harvested last season.

Several business men, armed with shotguns and pistols, waited at points of vantage and when the bandits emerged from the bank let go a volley of bullets.

The bandits quickly shielded themselves with their hostages and returned the fire, slightly wounding Harold Litterell.

The bandits then herded their captives into their car and sped away amid a hail of bullets, the vigilante business men directing their fire as to least endanger the safety of the hostages.

One of the bandits was believed to have been wounded.

From the striker's viewpoint they chose the most opportune time for the walkout. The influx of cattle was so great stragglers had to be shot.

Never before have there been so great a number of cattle in the yards, the usual quota being far surpassed by the presence of 42,000 head belonging to the government, shipped in from drought areas.

Byrd Party Halted, Returns to Its Base

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica, July 24.—(INS) — (Via MacKay radio) — Barked by deep snows which buried the flags marking the trial, the tractor expedition which set out last Friday for the Boiling advance base where Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd has been spending the winter months alone, was enroute back to the main base here today.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, in command of the tractor expedition, decided to turn back after it had required more than 100 miles of zig-zag traveling over the ice and snow fields to reach the half-way point fifty miles from Little America. Beyond the half-way mark the trail ran through a broken ice field full of dangerous crevasses.

To attempt to traverse it without the aid of the flags planted last fall by the advance parties would have been extremely hazardous.

BERRY CROP SLIM

PORTLAND, Ore.—Some 10,000 huckleberry pickers, including hundreds of Yankima Indians, will find the picking slim around the base of Mount Adams where nature has provided thousands of acres of wild huckleberry patches. Late frosts have destroyed practically all of the crop. The Yakima tribes, who always make pilgrimages to the huckleberry fields, will stay at home this season.

PROFITABLE RAIN

McGREGOR, Ia.—It rained a tenth of an inch here early in the day of the American Legion's annual celebration. The rain in no way hampered the festivities. However, the Legion had an insurance policy calling for payment of $500 to cover expenses in case of rain. So it shattered the old saying that "you can't have your cake and eat it."

Chicago Woman Tells How To Lose Fat

Gain Physical Attractiveness and Pop At Small Cost.

Read this letter all you fat men and women who really want to get rid of your burden of fat.

"I am using Kruschen Salts not only for reducing but for its beneficial effects. It keeps the whole body in condition. I have been taking Kruschen for one year, my weight was 186 lbs. I now weigh 120 lbs. I recommend it to all my friends." Miss Elener Medlo, 3004 So. Wells St., Chicago, Ill.

Don't let anyone persuade you. Mrs. Overweight, that Kruschen Salts won't melt away your fat—perhaps the women who are so anxious for you not to take it don't want to see you look years younger with 20 pounds of excess baggage removed.

Have a mind of your own—just try one jar of Kruschen (last 4 weeks) and then you'll know for yourself the joy of losing pounds of excess fat—and at the same time gain in health—clearer skin—brighter eyes—spirited activity. Get a jar at Hamilton & Ryan's or any druggist in the world—take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water first thing in the morning.—Adv.

CHILDREN'S PARTY AT COUNTRY CLUB

Small children of members of the Pickaway Country Club took possession of the club grounds Monday morning as they joined in a children's party, the first of its kind to be sponsored by the club committee.

Games and various contests were enjoyed during the morning by approximately 30 little guests and at 11:30 a. m. a delectable lunch was served by the committee in charge. Responsible for the success of the affair were the following members of the committee: Mrs. Clark Will, Misses Katherine Foreman, Rosemary Jackson, Ellen Bennett, Charlotte Moore and Jane Mader.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS AT HOME OF MRS. MARCY

Mrs. Gilbert Edgington, S. Court-st., was a substituting guest when Mrs. Delos Marcy entertained her two-table bridge club at her home in Williamsport, Monday evening.

Following several rounds of play, the score tallies were added and the winners were found to be Miss Esther Drum, Mrs. Edgington and Miss Pauline Hill. Delectable refreshments were served late in the evening.

Miss Wilmina Phebus entertains the club in two weeks.

John W. Richards, headmaster of Lake Forest academy, Lake Forest, Ill., was the guest over Sunday of Frank Fischer and Foster Bales.

The person who mutilated seats in the Cliftona Theatre is asked to call at the theatre this evening and settle for the damages.

This person is known by the management, and if no appearance is made, such person will be prosecuted.

Radium in Bulgaria
SOFIA—A new supply of radium has been discovered in Bulgaria. Recently minerals containing uranium and radium were discovered near the village of Streltscha. A foreign company applied for prospecting licenses, but the government waiting to await the results of its own survey, denied the application.

CAMPERS RETURN, MORE TO ATTEND

Miss Evelyn Hill, of Darbyville, Winona Peters of St. Paul, Harold Riffle of Pickaway-twp, John Peters of Lockbourne, and Miss Mary Shortridge, county club leader, have returned from a week's training at southwest district camp for elder 4-H club members and leaders. These young people were sent by the Pickaway-co Farm bureau.

Camp Clifton is situated near Yellow Springs, in Greene-co. The locality is not unlike that of Old Man's Cave in Hocking-co. Here the boys and girls are given careful instruction in vesper and camp fire programs in leather work, basketry, in making equipment for games, in conducting games, in music and musical games and folk dancing, in nature study and also in bed making and dish washing. At least two hours a day were spent in discussion by members of various clubs. These discussions tended to help many a member and young leader over some difficulty in his own club. Faculty members for this camp consisted of extension workers from Ohio State university, agents and home demonstration agents.

Guy Dowdy, former agent of Pickaway-co was director of the camp.

Beginning Monday, July 30th, a camp of one week's duration will be conducted for the regular members of Pickaway- Fayette, Clark and Champaign counties. A large attendance is expected. The cost per camper is $4. This camp will be directed by C. E. Rowland, agent of Clark-co.

Any Pickaway-co 4-H Club member or leader wishing to go to camp should get in touch with Mary Shortridge at once.

FRUIT MEN PLAN STATE WIDE MEET

Horticulture Society Chooses Milford Center Orchard For Sessions.

Plans have been completed for a state wide meeting of fruit growers on the farm of the Ohio Orchard Company at Milford Center, Thursday, August 16. C. E. Dutton, manager, will be the host. The occasion is the annual summer meeting of the Ohio State Horticultural Society.

The orchards, located centrally in the state, comprise about 120 acres in full bearing. A crop of about 40,000 bushels in prospect, of which about 25,000 bushels can be stored on the farm. Much of the marketing is done at the farm. Morning of the day will be devoted to tours of the orchards. In the afternoon several speakers will be heard, including Mr. Dutton and H. D. Hootman, secretary of the Michigan State Horticultural society.

UNUSUAL PRACTICES

Several unusual orcharding practices are employed by the Ohio Orchard Company, according to F. H. Beach, secretary of the society. The orchard is equipped for irrigation. Water is distributed by the ooze hose method. Early varieties of apples that had been irrigated are now topping the Columbus and Cleveland markets. One feature of the farm is a completely equipped building for cider manufacture. The tractors, cultivating equipment, sprayers, trucks, sizing, grading and packing equipment will be on display. Most of the spraying is done with a 50 gallon per minute outfit mounted on a balloon-tired truck. This rig will be demonstrated. The society this year is holding but one summer meeting. In the past two have been held, one in the northern part of the state and the other in the southern part. On the following day the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station at Wooster will be visited for orchard day.

MOUNTAIN OF ICE
HOT SULPHUR SPRINGS, Colo. A "Mountain of Ice" discovered by C. B. Owens, road contractor, complicated his job of excavating for a railroad overpass a mile and a half east of here. A few feet under the surface, he found rocks held together in a mass of ice. Geologists expressed the opinion that a glacier had been covered by a landslide at that point.

Maryland
Maryland was named in honor of Henrietta Maria, wife of Charles I, King of England. The words of the song were written in 1861 by James Ryder Randall, a Baltimore newspaper man. The air was borrowed from an older song.

ARE YOU interested in a good, dependable gas service at a fair rate or an unknown, untried, blue-sky service at a cheap rate?

Reliable natural gas service isn't just an overnight happenstance. It has taken forty years of plant building and production development to give the quality of assurance to your gas service which seems so commonplace to you now. The greatest guarantee of service is a record of performance.

No city has better gas service than this one now has. Only cities committing a similar folly can have service so poor as this one, once it has fallen for the empty promise of promoters. When you need medical service, you see a physician. When you need legal advice you see a lawyer. When you want plumbing you see a plumber. Why, when you want good gas service, don't you rely on gas men?

It doesn't take much in the way of resources to talk cheap gas. Is it even plausible to expect that promoters without gas experience or tangible resources can furnish dependable service at cheap rates, when this company—backed by the greatest natural gas resources in the world—cannot maintain dividends because of present inadequate rates and increasing costs?

If a "bird in the hand" isn't worth two in the bush, isn't a gas service that is real, worth a lot more than promotion promises?
